Strong Points for Council.

In another column will be found expressions from a score of prominent business firms in leading cities of seven different western states on the subject of two or more telephone systems, based upon their own personal experiences. All are united upon two points—that it is a mistake that it is in the interest of economy, and that, instead of it being a convenience, it is a constant source of annoyance, several gentlemen pronouncing it a nuisance. They give the reasons. One of the complainants, who has four places, is obliged to pay for eight telephones.

The common complaint is that no business place can do business without at least two telephones; that one of the chief annoyances is that residence telephone users are constantly calling up and requiring the transfer of a message from one line to another as a favor, the resident user usually having but one of the 'phones. If a business house has but one, and half his customers or other places he has relations with have the other, his own telephone does him but half a service.

This is one feature of the matter which council must consider in its deliberations over the question which is to come before it in the discussion of the ordinance granting a franchise to the National Telephone Company. It is quite as important as the point that the report of the committee ignores the recommendations of the city attorney, in connection with the requirements that should be imposed upon the petitioners, compelling the company to guarantee, at the very beginning, to provide equal facilities with those now enjoyed, and an underground wire system. Any other consideration will not be endorsed by the telephone users, either in residences or business houses.

It should be borne in mind that the matter of the underground system is not alone an important factor to the property holders along the streets, who are already loudly complaining of the forest of poles and the network of wires, but it is important to the municipality itself as a whole. Even should the ordinance contain this provision, a very heavy bond should be required binding the franchise-holder to leave the streets and alleys in as good condition as that in which they were found before the beginning of the work; and a further bond that the construction of the plant is not for the purpose of selling out, or that the franchise is not to be used for such a speculative purpose.

A "Letter from Tokio."

The Wheeling Aguinaldo organ says that a "Tokio" letter to the Boston Transcript quotes Admiral Dewey as declaring: "Rather than make war of conquest on these people I would sail away." It is stated also that General Otis does not believe in annexation.

There are two or three reasons why there cannot be any truth in these statements. In the first place, it is alleged to be a letter to the Boston Transcript, one of the most malicious of the organs that are publishing everything possible to create in this country antagonism to the American cause and create sympathy for Aguinaldo and his cause. The Transcript never fails to take opportunity to bring our own flag, our brave soldiers, our military commanders at Manila, and our President into contempt, and publishes every absurd tribute to the Philippine "patriots" it can get hold of; it denounces the American soldiers as being engaged in brutal outrages and compares their efforts for peace and order as savagery, rapine and murder. The Boston papers engaged in this business are among those that General Otis complained of as embarrassing the cause, in his recent official report.

In the second place, the remark attributed to Admiral Dewey never could have been uttered by him. To say that it was to impeach his integrity as the Admiral of the American Navy, whom all Americans and all nations honor, and whom this entire country is impatiently awaiting to pay personal tribute on his arrival from the scene of his years' achievements, during which not one word or act of his was capable of criticism. Among Admiral Dewey's last words to his crews, on his departure from Manila, was the sentiment that he hoped the subjection of the insurrection would come soon; that his heart would be with the army and the navy at the scene of hostilities, which is more than the paper printing the letter from Tokio has said for them.

The Admiral of the Navy is not a man to make such a remark as is quoted. He is the last American citizen who would say such a thing. It would not be natural for so brave a commander in the service. He would bring upon him the contempt of the entire navy, and the contempt of civilization. It is an insult to him to publish it in the spirit in which the Boston Transcript and the Wheeling organ of Aguinaldo publishes it. As to Otis and annexation. He is the commander of the American army in the field. Annexation is not his portion, and his terms of peace to Aguinaldo, "unconditional surrender," give the lie to talk about his position. The settlement of that question is not for our brave officer. It is wholly within the province of Congress.

A Boat of Forty Days.

The Register publishes, under a display head, an article entitled "A Message to Garcia," based on the famous exploit of Captain Rowan in making his perilous trip to bear a message from President McKinley to Garcia in the interior of Cuba. After relating the incident of the exploit the Register quotes from the "preachment" entitled "A Message to Garcia," written by Elbert Hubbard, of East Aurora, New York, and in circulation in pamphlet form by General Passenger Agent Daniels, of the Grand Central railway. If the Register will turn to its file of the Intelligencer, of June 1, if it has one, it will find this identical preachment which it quotes, under a copyright line, with the statement that the Intelligencer was permitted to publish it by Mr. Hubbard, only on condition that the copyright line be used. Our friend publishes "only a few clippings from this noted article." The Intelligencer printed it in full, and complied with the copyright law, with an introductory similar to the Register's. But it does not matter about this.

Leading business men in Wheeling, for reasons given at the time, had asked the Intelligencer to reproduce the article, and one of them wrote to Mr. Daniels of the Grand Central, in whose name it was also copyrighted, being doubly protected, and secured his own and Mr. Hubbard's consent. Mr. Hubbard's letter, which we have on file, reads:

"I have your kind favor addressed to Mr. George H. Daniels, wherein you ask permission to publish in the Wheeling paper the article entitled 'A Message to Garcia.' In reply I will say that I give you full permission to do so, with the understanding, of course, that you give due credit and note the fact at the heading of the article that it is copyrighted by Elbert Hubbard. You, of course, understand that this is for our better protection.

With all kind wishes, ever and always,
ELBERT HUBBARD.

If the Register had been awake a little more than a month ago it might have demonstrated more clearly, by its own action, the principle brought out by the preachment based on the Rowan incident. It might have then carried the message to its readers, or at least, have observed the copyright law.

Anti-Expansion Consolation.

F. W. Sylvester, an American member of a big mercantile, contracting and shipping firm, who has returned to London from Manila and Hong Kong, issues his views on the policy of this government in the Philippines, in which he sides with the Filipino cause, pays a high tribute to Aguinaldo, and holds him up as a martyr. His letter, which is heralded by the "anti-imperialist" fanatics as a big thing, because it doesn't come from a theorist of the Boston variety, but from a "business man," is but a rehash of all the exploded stories about poor, down-trodden Washington-Bosaris-Aguinaldo, who is struggling for "human freedom," will not cause the government to withdraw the army and forsake its obligations.

One of these papers thinks Sylvester's letter is entitled to credit because no other man has had such opportunities to learn the facts—not even our military and naval officers, and the soldiers and sailors, and the commissioners of peace, nor other government agents. The only unconsoling thing he says to the "anti's" is one which is entirely inconsistent with the rosy-hued painting which had led them to hope that the United States might, after all, be forced to abandon the work it is doing. It comes at the conclusion, when he remarks:

"If our troops coop up Aguinaldo and his followers in Luzon, I believe that Aguinaldo will then realize that his case is hopeless, and will come to terms with the United States government and end the war. The greatest stress must be laid on the necessity of patrolling the coast of Luzon."

This would be to prevent Aguinaldo from an effort to get out of Luzon, and go to one of the other islands. But why did this contractor for ammunition and arms for the Chinese government take columns to convince the "anti's" that the Philippines deserved to win, only to endorse in the end the plan of campaign adopted already by Otis? If the argument and consolation was so soon to be done for, what was it begun for?

A local correspondent in the New York Sun, with a sense of humor, gives some instances of "rich nomenclature" in a couple of counties in the entire state. Among the notable ones he mentions Verome Crotchstapf, who was recently a resident of Warren county; Spink-Jakway, was the name of a recently deceased citizen; Fourse Farwell, and Emerald Smile are distinguished residents, and a well known Populist leader is Mr. De Myl S. Pero, while two other residents are Philetus Bump and Maglover Damme. Another correspondent informs the Sun that Culpepper Exum is an honored and esteemed citizen of his town.

The caucus of the Republican members of the city council did a good thing last night when it chose Dr. Charles M. Frisell to the place on the board of public works, made vacant by the death of the late B. F. Bachmann. Dr. Frisell is well equipped for this responsible position, and, personally, no citizen is better known nor more popular. His views upon the needs and municipal economics in general are progressive, intelligent and businesslike. He deserves a unanimous election, and it goes without saying that he will render good and faithful service.

The greatest trust of the present day is noted in some verses, of which the following is the concluding one:
"The Octopus gobbled the summer time,
And only an Octopus must,
And the men, who before,
Ruled the sea and the shore
Were crushed by the Summer Girl Trust."

FREE TO SUFFERERS.

The New Cure for Kidney, Bladder and Uric Acid Troubles.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy. It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century; discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing kidney, liver, bladder and uric acid troubles. Swamp-Root has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless too poor to purchase relief, and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of the Wheeling Daily Intelligencer who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble. When writing mention reading this generous offer in the Wheeling Daily Intelligencer and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Birmingham, N. Y. The regular fifty cent and one dollar sizes are sold by all first-class druggists.

REFLECTIONS ON HOGG.

Perhaps Bryan wishes now he had acknowledged that Tammany invitation.—Chicago Record (Ind.)

There is a loud and confused squeal in the Tammany pen. Mr. Hogg upset the trough.—Washington Star (Ind.)

New York is becoming interested in the question whether Croker or Bryan is the bigger man.—Philadelphia Ledger (Ind.)

The fight between Tammany and Bryan should be encouraged. It is a glorious thing for the country.—Chicago Post (Ind. Rep.)

As a synonym of peace will the lion's lying down with the lamb be supplanted in Tammany circles by the tiger resting with the Hogg?—Philadelphia Times (Dem.)

The launching of the presidential boom of Augustus Van Wyck at the Tammany Hall celebration provoked unprecedented enthusiasm for Bryan and free silver.—Detroit Free Press.

Tammany Hall seems to have become really enthusiastic for Bryan just at the time when other Democrats throughout the country were losing their enthusiasm for him.—Buffalo Express (Ind.)

If Boss Croker thought he had the Tammany machine set so it would run smoothly during his trip abroad he will be horrified by the news of the proceedings on the Fourth. Just when he thought he had the 16 to 1 fire smothered it breaks out fiercely in a new spot. Mr. Croker should hurry home.—Indianapolis Journal (Rep.)

REFLECTIONS OF A BACHELOR.

Love may have its limits, but there aren't any limits to loving. Heaven lies about us in our infancy, and it may be that our infancy lies about us in heaven.

The mind that is best fitted to criticize a great work of art is the one that it holds to silence.

There is no such thing as a woman who loves her husband and who does not believe in a hereafter.

The man who is most conceited about himself is generally the least conceited about his wife.—New York Press.

Blood Thicker Than Water.

Lord Charles Beresford, in the Pall Mall Magazine: That it exists there can be no doubt. Even to people on this side of the Atlantic it is apparent; and those who, like myself, have lately passed through the United States can testify to its intensity and spontaneity. The cause which has produced it is not far to seek. A greater sympathy and friendship has been apparent for two or three years. Even the excitement about the Venezuelan dispute failed to disturb it; and when it looked as if Continental Europe was disposed to enter the contest between the defense of Spanish interests and a view of humiliating the United States, which extended from the man in the street to the cabinet minister at Whitehall. We pitied the fall of Spain, but we could not help feeling that our kinsmen were taking up the cause for which this country in the past has spent so much and made such gigantic sacrifices. As became a neutral, we were unmoved spectators of events until that winter whose which stirred us all to our depths.

When it became evident that an intrigue was on foot to throw a Latin alliance into arms against the United States, the voice of Great Britain was unmistakably heard, and we showed plainly that in such an event Great Britain must be reckoned with our kinsmen. But by her sons ashore, and abroad by a combination of Continental Europe, would have to meet the whole Anglo-Saxon race in armed alliance. The storm passed, but that little proof of our sincerity did more than a torrent of words to establish cordial relations between the United States and Great Britain. Our kinsmen realized for the first time, what we have never doubted over here, that, differ as we may between ourselves, neither of us would ever see the flag of Anglo-Saxon freedom dipped on either side of the Atlantic to an overwhelming combination of Continental Europe.

"The Lords of Creation."

(The following song was very popular fifty years ago, and has recently been revived. The people who used to sing it are old now, and cannot recall the author. Perhaps some of our own veteran citizens can remember the author and the air.)
The Lords of Creation men they call,
"That's the people who used to sing it all old now, and cannot recall the author.
But they're under a woman's control.
As ever since the world began
With all their heads in the sky,
For did not Adam, the very first man,
The very first woman obey?
Obey, obey, obey! The very first woman obey.

Ye lords who are present, hear my song,
And I know you will quickly say,
Our size more large, our nerves more strong,
Shall the stronger the weaker obey?
But think not, though these words we hear,
We shall let our mind the words you say,
For as long as a woman's possessed of a tear,
She will certainly have her own way.
Own way, own way, own way, own way,
She will certainly have her own way.

But should there be so strange a wight
Though much astonished at the sight,
We should still have no cause to fear,
Then let them please themselves awhile,
With all their heads in the sky,
For as long as a woman's possessed of a smile,
Their power will vanish away.
Away, away, away, their power will vanish away.
Then, ladies, since I have made it plain
That the lords are really in vain,
We'll even let them hold the rein,
But will show them the way to go,
As ever since the world began,
With all their heads in the sky,
And we'll manage it so that the very last man
Shall the very last woman obey.
Obey, obey, obey, shall the very last woman obey.

FOR forty years Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry has been curing summer complaint, dysentery, diarrhoea, bloody flux, pain in the stomach, and it has never yet failed to do everything claimed for it.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

The man who goes through life alone generally has poor company.

Many a man who seems dead to the world is only buried in thought.

You can't always tell the amount of gas the poet consumes by his meter.

Children are like clocks; too much regulating is apt to make them go wrong.

Paradoxical though it may seem, some office-holders are very much out of place.

Flies seem to know that a red-nosed man is liable to make something with sugar in it at any moment.

A man is always busy attending to his own affairs when there is an unpaid piece of work to be performed.

HIGH LIGHTS.

Between two evils, choose the greater and then change your mind.

A good housekeeper is one who would rather see a burglar in her dining room than a fly.

Next to the fit of your shirt waist, the other woman always notices how it is "done up."

Many an every-day woman composes poetry in the pretty knack she has of doing up her hair.

When a man recounts the mean things he did at school his wife wonders that he is as decent as he is.

When the average man says he is going to sleep late he always gets up and grumbles long before breakfast is ready.

The man who wants to live in the country generally has a wife who won't move out where there aren't any ten-cent stores.—Chicago Record.

PASSING PLEASANTRIES.

Choosing a Term—"I understand he has met with financial reverses." "Oh, dear, no. He wasn't wealthy enough for that. He has merely gone broke."—Chicago Evening Post.

That man cheated me out of a cool million." "Ah—wouldn't let you marry his daughter, I suppose?" "No; he let me marry her, and doesn't give us a cent."—Detroit Free Press.

Wife—"The price of the clock was $2, but I got a discount, so it only cost me $1.50." Husband—"Yes, but you could have got the same thing at Bezie's for $1.10. Wife—"That may be, but then Bezie wouldn't have taken off anything."—Tit-Bits.

Father (to son from whom he has just accepted a cigar)—Excellent! How much did you pay? Son—"They're three for a quarter." Great Scott! And I content myself with two for a nickel." "That's a different matter. If I had as large a family as you, to support I shouldn't smoke at all."—Life.

"O! say, father," said little Patrick Timmie O'Brien, "why didn't Saint Patrick sign the Declaration of Independence? Didn't they ask him?" "Tis, Timmie; they asked him all right," said Mr. O'Brien; "but, ye see, he 'tought th' man that brought it to him was wan o' these autygraft-hunters, an' he chucked him out o' the house."—Harper's Bazar.

"Great Jupiter," he exclaimed, "I don't see why you would swear that way, just because of a dressmaker's bill," she protested. "You are right," he replied. "Now that I stop to think of the attire of the female member of Jupiter's family, I realize that he is not the god to be invoked on an occasion like the present. He doesn't know anything about it."—Chicago Evening Post.

Harry—I had a letter to-day from Mrs. Mustadeed, the Christian Scientist, who treated Aunt Hannah. Dick—What did she have to say? Harry—Oh, nothing much. She said she was pained because we had not settled with her. Dick—And, of course, you replied to her that there is no such thing as pain; that it is only a creature of the imagination.
